County set to begin recycling initiative

by Susan Grober

If all goes as planned, a county-wide recycling and composting program will be underway this fall.

A program proposal was accepted by county council at its last meeting, and the county will proceed to apply for funding to cover the total start-up cost of $524,000, of which the county will pay $270,800.

"I'm really excited that it's going, because I'm seeing a light at the end of the tunnel," says county Waste Management Co-ordinator Len Munt.

"It's probably going to be a slower start than most people want. But there is some real costing here, so you really have to figure out what you're going to do, and how you're going to do it, before you do it."

The program recommended by consulting engineers A.J. Robinson and Associates is one-box separation with backyard composting.

Residents will separate recyclables into one container, which they take to a drop-off depot at their local landfill site.

The depot is separated into compartments for various recyclable materials, and picked up on a regular basis by a contractor who transports it to a local facility for further sorting before the materials are sold to end markets.

Residents will also separate their kitchen and yard wastes for composting in backyard bins, which will be purchased by the county.

An important component will be promotion and education, to make the public aware of how to use the program.

The county's share of $270,800 will cover the cost of compost barrels, drop-off depots, promotional and educational material, blue boxes, and a 25 per cent contingency.

Munt says the program will most likely begin with backyard composting.

"Some municipalities, like Dysart and Bicroft, have already started composting," he says. "So let's get the rest of the county going on it, and then we'll get to other aspects of recycling."

The first job, however, is to figure out the best ways of implementing the recycling program. "I'll hopefully get enough information to put together a small report for the steering committee meeting on August 21," says Munt.

Items to be considered are whether to tender the work, or have the county handle some and tender part of it out.

The types of composters and blue boxes to be purchased must also be studied.

"I want it to be done right, first thing, so we get the best composters for the area," says Munt. "It's no use having this fancy-dancey composter if nobody wants to use it."

It's possible that some groups, such as boy scouts, may wish to get funding to build their own composters, and then sell them. "They could make some dollars for that group," says Munt.

To start the program, the county will purchase 22 drop-off depots, 18,000 blue boxes, and 5,000 compost barrels.

Grants are provided by the Ministry of the Environment and the Ontario Multi-Materials Recycling Incorporated (OMMRI), and cover portions of capital costs and five years of operating costs.

Munt has recommended that the county wait until funding is set before spending any money, even though approval could take at least two months.

"I want to make sure when we get started on recycling that it's going to be

The planners want to hear from you

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

If residents of Haliburton County want to get involved in the county official plan, now is the time to speak up, says county planner Mark Stagg.

"Of all the times to speak forth, this is a very important one," Stagg said in an interview last week. "The more that is said now, the less frustration and problems we'll have in the future."

The county has recently released a public discussion paper which outlines, in general terms, the policies which will be covered by the official plan.

Issues include the economy, the environment, population, and the distribution of responsibilities between the county and the 10 municipalities.

Residents are being asked to answer a series of questions which will give the county an indication of how each of the issues should be handled by the official plan.

Although a formal official plan will not be ready for at least two years, Stagg says the information gathered this summer will determine the general direction of policies in the plan.

The county is also hosting a series of public meetings later this month to allow for public input into the official plan. Stagg says the meetings will provide an opportunity for people to learn about the plan and voice any concerns or opinions they may have.

"There will not be a lot of fancy maps or proposals," he said. "We will just walk through the discussion paper and throw it open to questions."

Once the completed questionnaires and the information from the public meetings have been collected, Stagg says the county planning department will "put it all together and try to seize a sense of which direction the people want us to go in."

"It will help us create a vision and a set of goals," he said. "It is a very crucial step in the process. This is where we get our bearings."

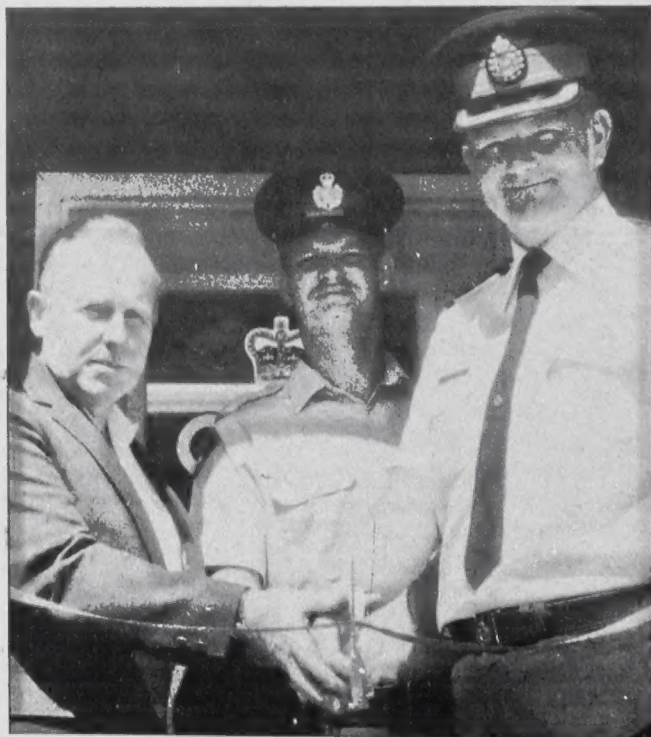

Once the goals of the plan have been identified, Stagg says they will be presented to county council who must then

Community police building opened

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

Minden's response to community policing should serve as an example for other villages, says an OPP official responsible for community policing at District Headquarters in Peterborough.

Inspector Keith Buxton complimented Minden for its efforts at last Wednesday's official opening of the new downtown police office.

"In my heart, I think this is one of the finest buildings I've seen established," said Buxton. "This is the true meaning of community policing."

While it's easy to get residents to pay for a building by using tax dollars, Buxton said the fact that donations covered most of the cost, made the effort worthwhile.

Now that an office has been built and a committee established, Buxton says the OPP must live up to its end of the bargain and provide police services to the village.

Staff Sergeant Bill Elliott of the OPP's Minden detachment thanked everyone who contributed to the construction of the office.

Minden Reeve Bern Berry said he is really proud of the new building and thanked police committee chairman Doug Campbell for his efforts in coordinating construction.

Kudos for Campbell also came from Sergeant Steve Adam, who presented Campbell with a plaque which recognizes his contributions to the project. "We know that Doug was a bit of a slave driver to have the job done on a certain date," said Adam. "The guys recognize his effort and dedication."

Campbell said the village will now have the benefit of a very fine building which will serve as a base for police services. "Hopefully this cooperation will carry on and we will have good community police activity."

Just prior to the official opening Dave McAdam, president of the Minden Legion, presented Berry with a cheque for $1,808 which covers the cost of the carpet, vertical blinds and energy-efficient window film for the police office.

Total donations for the project were $19,620 while the municipality financed the remaining $10,526.

Thank you!

At a time when civic pride is often hard to come by, Minden residents have given new meaning to the word "community". By pooling resources, money and good-old-fashioned hard work, we have established a first-class community police office which not only provides the basis of improved police services but will serve as a lasting symbol of what a united community can accomplish.

From the first approach by the OPP earlier this year to last Wednesday's official opening, there are many people who deserve our gratitude.

Long-time Minden resident Earl Hewitt helped resolve the search for a suitable location for the office by suggesting the municipal site beside the CIBC, where public washrooms once stood.

This suggestion provided the permanent Main Street location desired without requiring a prohibitive outlay of money from the municipality.

The Minden Kinsmen Club gave the project much-needed momentum when the members offered to erect the building, significantly cutting the overall cost of construction.

The Kinsmen provided the labour

Not only did the Kinsmen work through sweltering heat to frame and close the building over the course of two days, their skill and professionalism resulted in a structure which is an attractive addition to the village and a credit to the community. Once a site had been chosen, and the municipal council had given its support to the construction of the building, Deardon, Stanton, Stones and Strongman provided a survey of the site at one-third the standard cost. Dave Petney of Home Hardware and Building Supplies produced, at no charge, two complete sets of blueprints for the building. The cost of building materials was discounted by 13 per cent and John Petney Sr. personally ensured prompt delivery to the work site. The Rotary Club of Minden covered the purchase of building materials.

Rotary paid for building materials

Before construction could begin, there was a significant amount of site preparation required including leveling the lot, removing a 2,000-gallon holding tank and breaking down the concrete foundation to a level which would allow wheelchair access to the office. This work was carried out by Clayton Cameron, Max McKelvey and Jack Barnhardt of the municipal roads department. Derrick Warburton, an employee of J.A.C. Kernohan, helped with the compressor and jack hammer and Brian Kernohan used a transit to level and square the foundation.

Tom Hubercheck, Minden's Chief Building Official, contributed to the design of the building and carried out the necessary inspections in a timely manner.

During construction, Stuart Brandon, owner of Northland Footwear, provided hydro to the site and both Mr. Brandon and CIBC manager Clyde Russel allowed use of their properties for storing material. Jim Garbutt provided a truck in which scraps were thrown to keep the job site neat and orderly and then transported the waste to the landfill site. Riverview Furniture provided the use of their storage shed to store tools.

With the building framed, the interior work began. Modern Electric installed the electrical service and donated five fluorescent fixtures and bulbs. Highland Plumbing donated a vanity top, basin and faucet, toilet and seat, and reduced labour costs by $5/hour for two employees. Don Campbell installed insulation, vapour barrier, ceiling tiles, panelling and external siding and did not charge overtime rates despite working well into the evening to complete the office in time for the July long-weekend.

The Legion paid for carpet and blinds

The Minden branch of the Royal Canadian Legion covered the cost of the carpet and vertical blinds, purchased from Riverview Furniture, and energy efficient film for the windows. The Kinettes donated an air conditioner to the office.

Minden OPP Sergeants Steve Adam and Art Goard loaded and delivered the furniture from the detachment to the community office and Sgt. Goard made the display boards for the maps of the county and village which hang in the office. Sgt. Adam constructed a dedication plaque which hangs inside the door of the office.

The Kinettes bought an air conditioner

Gino Ziorjen applied the wood preservative to the exterior siding and the interior trim.

As you can see, this building was the result of the efforts of a great number of people and, as such, is truly a community accomplishment from which we can all derive a great deal of pride.

On behalf of the Minden Community Policing Committee, I would like to personally thank all the people who were involved with the establishment of a community police office in the Village of Minden. With such a positive show of support from the residents, the committee members are confident that community policing will be a successful addition to village life, and we look forward to addressing the needs and concerns of Minden's citizens. I would also like to take this opportunity to thank The Times for their coverage of the office construction.

Chairman,
Community Policing Committee

Public input sought

begin the process of achieving these goals by developing specific policies.

Stagg will be recommending to county council that the results of the public meetings and questionnaires be released to the public.

"To do justice to the system, you have to invite people's opinions, pay attention to what they say, and then report back to them so they can see that they are part of the whole thing and will recognize the process is genuine," he says.

When writing the questionnaire, Stagg felt it was important to give people choices and allow for a wide range of opinions.

The timing of the questionnaire and public meetings is also important. Stagg says because a large proportion of Haliburton County property owners are seasonal residents, summer is the only logical time to gather public input.

And for the county plan process to be successful, the public must be involved he said.

"The county plan is a legal document of county council, but in a deeper sense it is there to provide us with a set of goals and objectives which determine where we want to go and how we want to get there," he said. "If we really want this thing to work, people have to have a stake in it and a sense of ownership. It was to be a county plan in the broad, public sense."

The current term of county council ends this year and Staff admits that the municipal elections in November could result in many new faces at the council table.

In an effort to maintain continuity, the county has been sending information releases to each municipal councillor in the county to provide all politicians with up-to-date information.

Stagg says it's quite possible that any new county councillors are currently serving on municipal councils and the releases will help make them aware of the planning department's activities.

The county has also been providing information to the municipal clerks, and Stagg says they will play a vital role in informing new councillors about planning issues and the county plan.

"Another form of continuity is the people themselves," he said. "I do not expect a wholesale change of residents and I'd like to believe that what they feel the direction of the official plan should be this year is what they will believe next year. The broad direction should be the same."

Copies of the discussion paper and the questionnaire have been sent to municipal councils, the presidents and secretaries of 110 lake associations, most provincial agencies and some federal departments, professional people involved in the county plan and service clubs.

Anyone who wants a copy of the discussion paper can pick one up at the county office in Minden, at their local municipal office or contact the county to have a copy mailed.

The public meetings are being held in Wilberforce and Haliburton Village on Saturday, August 17 and in Minden and Dorset on Saturday, August 24.

Consumers win with two summer sales

Consumers will have an opportunity to take advantage of two sales events organized by local business group in the coming week. On Thursday Minden and area businesses will be taking part in the annual Times Sidewalk Sale. In addition to the usual cascade of items on sale, shoppers will be entertained by costumed characters strolling through the crowd, a petting zoo on the village green, children's face painting at CHACE Place and the annual BIA Rock Bass Fishing Derby. This is the ninth year for this popular summer sale that usually attracts a large crowd of enthusiastic buyers. Details as to what is on sale can be found in the special section of today's newspaper.

On Saturday, August 10, merchants in the Norland area will be offering shoppers a tax break. Many of the participating businesses will be absorbing the provincial and federal sales taxes on sales during that day. "Tax revolt sales" have attracted a great deal of interest lately as merchants attempt to stimulate business and make a statement about the increasing tax load. Details on that promotion can be found on pages 22 and 23.

Firefighters fake rescue using new Jaws for Life

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

Minden fire fighters demonstrated the department's new Jaws for Life auto extrication equipment at last Wednesday's Rotary Carnival.

The equipment, which was purchased following the successful completion of a $20,000 fund-raising campaign, will allow the fire department to free accident victims who are trapped inside vehicles.

During the demonstration two firefighters pretended to be trapped in a derelict car while other members used the power cutters, spreaders and rams to free their comrades.

The "rescue" drew a large crowd and Jim Wright, who sold the equipment to the fire department, explained each manoeuvre carried out by the fire department.

Using the various pieces of the Jaws for Life equipment, the fire fighters removed the two front doors, forced the dashboard away from the occupants of the car and removed the roof.

Wright says the equipment, which is manufactured by Amkus, is the most widely used in the world and has been chosen by fire departments in more than 30 countries.

Rescue 911

Members of Minden's fire department use their new Jaws for Life equipment to "rescue" two of their trapped comrades. Money for the equipment, which cost approximately $20,000, was raised through donations from people throughout the community. The demonstration was held at the Rotary Carnival last Wednesday.

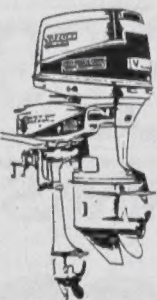

Minden fire chief Don Booth and deputy-chief Bill Hogg present Jim Wright of Associated Fire Equipment Research with a cheque for $21,200.25 in exchange for the auto extrication equipment.

Stanhope residents quiz assessor on MVA tax changes

by Carol Moffatt

A regional tax assessor says Market Value Assessment is considered by many to be unfair and that municipalities shouldn't be pushed into accepting it.

Ron Young, Regional Assessment Commissioner for Haliburton, Peterborough and Victoria told residents and cottagers of Stanhope that MVA is a simpler tax system, one that will "get rid of all the complicated figures" in the current taxation system.

"But I don't believe people see it as fair. I'm not going to convince the people of Stanhope that this is what they want to do,"

Young told about 100 people at the Stanhope Community Centre last Friday.

The meeting was arranged by council at the request of the Boshkung Lake Association so taxpayers in Stanhope - the municipality which will see the most increases - could find out more about Market Value Assessment.

MVA is a proposed system which will base taxes on the market value of a property - the more a property is worth, the more taxes the owner pays.

While this system will increase the taxes on more

County-wide recycling get approval

done right," he says. "It's got to be run tickety-boo, so people can't complain about it."

A report on the recycling proposal was on hand during a waste management open house held in Haliburton on July 13, and Munt says public input was positive.

Some suggestions made at the open house were even included with the report before it received county council's approval four days later.

Munt was relieved at council's response. "Now we at least have it okayed, so we can push on and ask questions, and get some answers."

The public will have more opportunities to provide input as the recycling program gets underway.

"The decisions that have to be made are not that we'll do it, but how we'll do it, and who will be doing what," says Munt. "It's more of the guts of the operation that have to be decided now."

By the end of the summer, Munt will have attended 10 or 12 property owners' association meetings, to speak on both waste management and the Gypsy moth spray program.

He's happy with public response so far, but would still like to see more people speaking out on the subject of waste management.

"I'm sure I'll be hearing from the public when we start spotting landfill sites, but I would like them to speak out before then."

In the meantime, Munt looks forward to seeing the progress of the recycling program.

However, he notes that recycling won't generate income for the county until the demand for recyclable materials increases.

"The province has got to crack down, and we have to start using some of the recycled materials instead of cutting down trees," he says.

"A lot of people are scared of recycling. They think, 'Sure you can recycle, but the stuff just gets driven to the next landfill site and dumped.'"

Munt feels the use of recycled materials must be promoted for such programs to work. He's enthusiastic about one company which makes a 'super wood' out of plastic which is used to make such sturdy items as outdoor furniture.

"I'm an optimist," he says. "I think recycling is the way to go, and the commodities are being used, and will be used more and more."

Once market prices for recyclable materials increase, "maybe we'll get a facility to hold the materials and market them ourselves," says Munt. "For instance, we would hold all plastics until the price goes up."

As it stands now, the revenue collected from end markets doesn't even come close to the cost of collecting, transporting, and handling materials.

According to the proposal, annual costs could range from $70,000 to $175,000, depending on market demand and the rate of residential recyclables which are diverted from the landfill sites.

For example, an annual fixed cost for the program is comprised of $30,000 for the recycling co-ordinator's salary, $20,000 for promotional materials, and $90,000 for a haulage contractor.

The county's share of $100,000 for these costs may be reduced by $30,000 if 25 per cent diversion is achieved, and there is revenue received for glass, tin and aluminum.

But if 25 per cent residential diversion is achieved, and the county has to pay the end markets to receive recyclables, then the annual cost would be increased by $75,000.

The recycling program will be discussed tonight (Tuesday) at county council chambers by the Public Liaison Committee for the waste management master plan.

The third 'R'

For a number of years now, the residents of Haliburton County have watched as larger centres in the province have forged ahead with recycling programs. Far from the recycling centres, it was often difficult, if not impossible, for local residents to participate in these efforts.

According to an announcement from the county's waste manger, that situation will soon be changing. That news should be welcomed by everyone in the Highlands who wants to do his or her part in protecting our environment. While it may be said that people who live in rural Ontario have a greater appreciation for the natural world, we still generate as much garbage as our city cousins, and shouldn't rely on the vast expanse of "wilderness" that surrounds us to absorb our cast-offs. Indeed, the responsibility of rural residents for the stewardship of the untouched parts of the province is even greater because it is these people who have the greatest impact on the land around them.

Over the past few years, most municipalities have introduced recycling centres at area dumps. The public has responded enthusiastically to this opportunity and will likely embrace the latest initiative announced by the county.

As valuable as increased recycling will be in reducing the amount of space being consumed in our landfill sites and in re-using material previously just covered over, recycling is in fact only the third 'R' in the environmental equation. It may be heartening to separate newspaper, glass and metal to be sent off for re-manufacture, but consumers shouldn't believe that is the only answer. Residents have a responsibility to reduce the amount of garbage they generate, to examine their lifestyles to find ways to cut down on the garbage, recyclable or not, which they take to the dump.

Recycling is important and plays a vital role in our protection of the environment, but, it shouldn't be considered the final solution to the ills which confront us. By all means, get into the recycling habit, but the world would be an even better place if everyone worked just as hard at reducing consumption and re-using the material they now have.

'Racist' term thrown around like baseballs

The assumption that psychocultural traits and capacities are determined by biological race.

The notion that one's own ethnic stock is superior.

Those are a couple of definitions of racism, culled from two different dictionaries lying around my house. I thought I ought to double-check because I was beginning to doubt if I knew what racism really was.

It's the term that gets thrown around with great frequency these days—and all the accuracy of an Phil Niekro knuckleball.

I've heard a member of Phil Donahue's audience call him a racist. I've heard picketers fling the same charges at Brian Mulroney, General Schwarzkopf and the entire nation-state of Japan.

Well, why not? It's a virtual hand-grenade of an epithet. Call somebody a racist and they're immediately put on the defensive. Gone forever is any debate over the merits (or otherwise) of the accused's position—he or she is going to be much too busy proving that they don't own any slaves or pay dues to a secret Aryan Nation cult.

by Arthur Black

Ask Dr. Jeanne Cannizzo. She's the curator who last year mounted the Into the Heart of Africa exhibition at the Royal Ontario Museum. The exhibition was comprised of artifacts plundered by nineteenth century white soldiers and missionaries sent to Africa. Into the Heart of Africa did not make white imperialists look good. Alas, it did not whip, scourge and castigate them sufficiently for the taste of its detractors. Dr. Cannizzo made the political error of showing history as it happened, not as it Ought to Have Been. The exhibition was picketed, as was Dr. Cannizzo herself. Activists invaded her lectures to shout obscenities at her. They blockaded her residence. They hounded and besieged her out of her job and into a nervous breakdown.

Ask Dr. Cannizzo about the smear power of the shout "Racism!" - if you can find her. She's on indefinite sick leave.

I wish it was possible to reincarnate Shakespeare, Milton or William Blake. I'd love to hear what they make of the current carnival. Mind you, they'd require a police escort. Shakespeare, Milton and Blake belong to that most repugnant of literary legions - they are Dead, White and Male. There are professors that actually teach that all of Shakespeare's writings, from Hamlet on the battlements to Falstaff under the table, are irrelevant and reprehensible because Shakespeare is a Dead White Male.

Which is a devastating triple barrelled shotgun blast - better even than calling someone a racist. "Dead" (more on page 7)

Central Sawyers were integral to Stanhope

Editor:

Having read, with interest, the article in The Times on the Stanhope Telephone Exchange, I would like to fill in some of the missing pages for those keeping the article.

In 1929, Ruth and Elmer Sawyer moved into the Stanhope telephone building located beside the Orange Hall, and just south of the Maple Lake United Church. They had one daughter and an infant son. She had operating experience when the switchboard was installed in 1921. Her father-in-law, long-time Stanhope reeve, was instrumental in bringing the telephone system to Stanhope before Minden and Haliburton.

The years ahead would not be easy. First, was the depression era where she said she saw more pay days than she saw pays. People struggled to get the few cents to pay for their one big luxury, the telephone.

When a lightning storm hit the switchboard up like a Christmas tree, she was ever alert to the difference between an emergency call and a strike. She became adept at cleaning and replacing carbon blocks and spark plugs after storms, which saved the linemen hours of time.

Ruth Sawyer was known as "Central", a place where everyone phoned for the "time", to see who died or who was ill, current events and many other topics.

Neighbours phoned their grocery orders to the store, the stage to Haliburton stopped by "central" three times a week, often on impassable roads. The groceries were left at "central" to be picked up by owners. Similarly, the Sawyer children picked up everybody's mail at Joneses store, and it was kept for pick up at central.

Ruth Sawyer was a natural nurse. During the depression, there was no money for doctors, but babies arrived just the same. The oldest can remember being called in the night to listen for emergency calls while their mother attended at a neighbour's to deliver a baby or to perform her special gift on someone with flu or pneumonia. Antibiotics were unheard of.

When a snow storm came up, many youngsters at the school next door were four miles from home. The straw or feather ticks came, and everyone bedded down on the floor. Everyone shared. Nobody knew much about nutrition, but somehow a breakfast at "central" of oatmeal porridge, homemade bread with a bit of peanut butter, if we were lucky, and home preserves couldn't be improved on.

The tiny Maple Lake area saw most young folks leaving for war service and five boys being killed. Namely, Jimmie Redner, Mervyn Harrison, Verne Cowen, George Swanton and Richard Dawson. "Central" had left the Great Depression to become a key figure in the Great War. The family recalls the Haliburton station agent phoning their mother to relay the sad telegram. She would call a neighbour to go with the boy's mother or she would walk the distance herself to be with the boy's mother to give her the tragic news. These mothers were all close relatives or friends. To Ruth Sawyer, this was a vital and natural part of community service.

At nine in the evening she "rang off". This consisted of ten short rings on each line. Everyone in Stanhope could set their clocks, and most wouldn't disturb "central" after. But summers were different. It was necessary to wait four to five hours to get a long distance call completed, and sometimes not at all. Stanhope, not having a long distance line of their own, was at the mercy of Dysart. While the Dysart operators helped, they served their customers first. This meant that 24-hour service was given voluntarily at Stanhope.

This courageous and caring lady, nearing 88 years of age, is in very poor health in Extencicare. Her employment was restricted to working for Stanhope. Leaving the exchange in 1948, she served the longest term of any operator in Stanhope before or after her, and during these most difficult years for Stanhope, she served extremely well.

Needless to say, the three Sawyer girls became telephone operators with the youngest one retiring from Bell after 40 years as a telephone operator.

(I am preparing a booklet for the museum from the diaries of Elmer Sawyer which will contain more telephone detail.)

Campaign to protect taxpayers is underway

Deficits are an accounting embarrassment and a taxpayer's nightmare. On their friendliest side they can be just small amounts of overspending that no reasonable person could foresee, a few hundred dollars here, a thousand dollars there. Their scariest nature creates tens to hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of debt from one year that must be paid off in the next year with new tax revenues.

Their worst feature is the camouflage they wear. No government you can name in this country ever provides details for overspending until prodded. The debt is simply totalled up and transferred into the next budget, quietly, so quietly.

We are interested in the details of Anson, Hindon, Minden's $100,000 overspending in 1990.

Now a point of clarification we did not think necessary after three months of repeating the same thing over and over....Reeve Davis of Dysart stated at county Council he was unsure of Tax Watch objectives. Let us say it again. KEEP LOCALLY CONTROLLED TAX INCREASES TO THE RATE OF INFLATION. FIGHT PROVINCIALLY CONTROLLED TAX INCREASES UNTIL THEY MATCH THE RATE OF INFLATION TOO.

Community Tax Watch

by Gary Kenney and John Beachli

Because local taxpayer's outrage has been ignored after months of their repeated attempts to cooperate with area politicians, the other shoe has not dropped. Tax Watch will become a registered, insured, funded, and organized coalition within a week. An August County public meeting is planned with the originators of the Ontario Coalition.

A 12 week telephone and letter writing campaign is under way. All candidates for local election in November will be receiving a questionnaire. All candidates will be graded in a future 'report card' on the basis of their answers (or lack of them), and previous political decisions (or lack of them).

The buck will stop with the voter. We will never have as much information to make an informed choice on a ballot as we will have this November. Will we care enough??

Animal group's restrictions far from humane

- that's the ultimate in ageist slurs; "male" is nakedly sexist. And slamming somebody for being "white"...isn't that, umm, Racist?

It's a virus that's spreading. Last month the Toronto Humane Society announced its proposed new restrictions for members. People who will no longer be permitted to join the society include: rodeo promoters, circus performers, animal researchers, breeders and their spouses.

Oh yes, and sport hunters, trappers, most farmers and slaughterhouse workers would be turned away as well.

Any native who makes the mistake of working in the summer as a guide, hunts moose or deer with his or her tribe - or who in fact, defends aboriginal hunting and trapping rights - would probably be excluded.

Which is virtually to say: Indians needs not apply.

But then I wear a fur trimmed parka, used to hunt groundhogs, own a couple of Ian Tyson (old bronc rider) albums and still have a porcupine-quill-bordered place mat from a restaurant in Muskoka. Guess I can't join either.

I don't know how meetings of the Brave New Toronto Humane Society will work out, but I'll predict one thing: They won't be crowded.

Dairy owner upset over moo-ved cows

'It makes you so mad,' Opal Crowe says of her vandalized lawn ornaments

by Susan Grober

Opal Crowe's cows may not be sacred, but the Minden resident is still pretty upset over the abuse they have received of late.

As proprietors of the Kawartha Dairy, Crowe and her husband, Don, have a fondness for cows, and own a vast collection of cow paraphernalia.

Last week two of their bovine beasts were vandalized.

The couple keeps six cement cows — two large and four small ones — on the front lawn of their home, next door to the Highway 35 dairy.

Two of the cows, a large one and a small one, were toppled over in the early hours of Wednesday morning. The legs of the smaller one were completely smashed.

"It makes you mad, because it's so close to the house," says Opal Crowe. "We're going to have to put lights out there or something."

The incident was especially upsetting for Crowe because one of her cows was actually stolen last year, so she kept the rest chained together at the ankles.

Crowe isn't sure when this most recent incident occurred, but she did hear a noise at a quarter after three that morning.

"I should have gone outside, because maybe I could have seen them and scared them away," she says.

Crowe reported the occurrence to the police, but was told nothing could be done. "They said they can't get fingerprints off of cement."

She says it wouldn't have bothered her as much if the cows were closer to the highway, but it's quite a trek up the hill to her home.

"It's just down on the doorstep, so it provokes me that I can't put anything out there.

These two cows were toppled by vandals last Wednesday.

"Why people have to go and do that, I don't know. It just makes me so mad that if I ever get my hands on them I'd like to strangle them."

Crowe says more than one person had to tip the cow, because the large cows are so heavy they had to be put on the lawn with a loader. "No one person could have had the strength to upset them."

The small ones were purchased in the United States, at $800 for three, and were painted by Crowe to look like Holsteins, with distinctive black spots on a white background.

The one with the broken legs cannot be repaired.

There are other decorative cows on the Crowes' lawn.

"It was kind of a nice lawn ornament, we thought, because we belong to the dairy and it just kind of goes with it, I guess."

They also have innumerable cow items inside their home, from tea towels to figurines.

"I have a real cow collection," says Crowe. "I started a while ago, and just kept on going. Every year I get something new. Everything's just cows."

The cement ornaments stand on either side of the lawn, and are similar to the large cow which stands on the roof of the dairy.

Crowe says they are a popular attraction.

"So many people come up and look at them, and compliment them."

Now she's not sure whether to keep anything outside her home, for fear of further damages.

And it bothers her that the culprits may return to finish off the job.

"Maybe they'll be back tonight, or the next night, to get the other side. I don't know what to do."

A tale of two cities:

Minden Rotary exchange students have different tales to tell

Alan Flemming loved Sao Paulo

by Susan Grober

Party. Party. Party.

What better way for a teenager from Lutterworth to spend 11 months in Brazil?

Of course, Rotary exchange student Alan Flemming did more than just sun himself on the beaches, revel in the bars, and savour food and drink at barbecues during his stay in the third largest city in the world, Sao Paulo.

But he did make the most of it, while it lasted.

"It was very relaxing," says Flemming, who's been back home for three weeks. "All I had to do was be happy all the time, present a good image of Canadians, and I was all set."

School was "a relief — from seven o'clock in the morning until 12 noon," he says.

"I had it pretty easy, because I was on exchange. They have morning classes and afternoon classes, but I only did one."

"School was not really top priority for me," he says, smiling. "I was supposed to go, but if I had anything better to do I could get off."

Top priority was traveling, which was usually done by bus with other students on Rotary exchange. "I went all over the cities," he says.

Flemming was in awe over Rio de Janeiro. "Everything they say about Rio is true. It was just fabulous."

Ironically, he had most fun at Oktoberfest, a traditional German celebration. "There is a pretty large German population in the south of Brazil," he says.

The weather was hot. While his loved ones back home battled blustery winter winds, Flemming enjoyed 42 C temperatures during the hottest months of the year, December and January.

And the beaches were incredible. "It was great," he says. "The blue waters, warm sun, soft sand and palm trees. It was really nice. I probably spent a month in total on the beach at various times during my stay."

On the beach, Flemming would do "the usual things. Play in the waves, sit in the sun, and talk to the locals."

He says the Brazilians are a diverse group. "There are so many different types of people there. But there are two distinct classes."

Ten per cent of the people are well-off to extremely wealthy, and 90 per cent are low to extremely poor, he says.

"A lot of my friends stayed with people in the upper 10 per cent, but the people you meet in the street and the people in the stores, most of them were in the lower class."

Through his travels in the big cities, Flemming saw many of the dingy, desolate shanty towns where the poor people live.

"One in Rio was really crowded," he says, showing a photograph he took of rows of shabby, brick buildings which look more like old factories than homes.

"And they have a fear of tourists. So if you're white, like, you don't go in because you won't come back."

(more on page 18)

Alan Flemming just returned from Brazil.

Dustin Davis heads off to Spain

by Susan Grober

Although he's a proud Canadian, Dustin Davis won't display the maple leaf flag at one event he plans to attend as a Rotary exchange student this year.

After all, who would want to wear red at a bullfight?

The 18-year-old Minden resident leaves for Zaragoza, Spain in September, and looks forward to watching the traditional spectacle where a bull is baited and killed by a matador.

Still, Spain wasn't his first choice of a country to visit. Davis would have preferred France or Belgium, so he could brush up on his French-speaking skills.

Unfortunately, because he will be 19 before September, the Rotary program won't accept him in most countries, only Finland or Spain.

"I hemmed and hawed, and hemmed and hawed, and hemmed and hawed before choosing Spain," Davis says from the kitchen of the farmhouse he shares with parents Jim and Bernie, and sister Deneena.

"I chose Spain because the language is the third largest in the world. Most South American countries speak Spanish, so it's a good thing to have."

Davis just completed Grade 12, and applied for the exchange program because he wants the opportunity to test his strengths before finishing high school.

"I wasn't sure what I wanted to do with myself yet, and travel is a learning experience. In high school, there's not much chance to try different things."

"It's not that I want to get out of Haliburton," he says. "I like Haliburton. I just thought it would be a change."

There are different departure dates for exchange students, and those who leave for Spain are the last to go, on September 4.

Davis won't start school there until October 1, "so I'll still have three weeks of summer holidays," he says.

"Some of the kids start school the day after they arrive. It's difficult, especially when you don't know the language. It's brutal."

The first priority is to learn the language. "I don't know much, and I haven't had much time to learn," says Davis, who has been working nearly 60 hours each week at Blairhampton Golf Course, to earn money for his year overseas.

Dustin Davis looks forward to Zaragoza

But he doesn't think it will take too long before he's speaking Spanish.

"From what I've heard, it's a very natural language, and fairly easy to learn. It will be a little hard at first, but I don't think I have to push myself because it's a matter of survival."

His second priority is simply to have a good time.

To do that, he must be able to get along with his host family, because he'll be spending the entire year with them.

Through the exchange program, most stay with two to four different families, but in Spain they just stay with one.

"When you only stay with each family for three months or so, you're still sort of treated like a guest," says Davis. "But for me it will be different. It's almost impossible to be treated like a guest for one year. They take you to places and then say, 'Well, we took you there once. What do you expect now?' And if you don't get along, then it's hard."

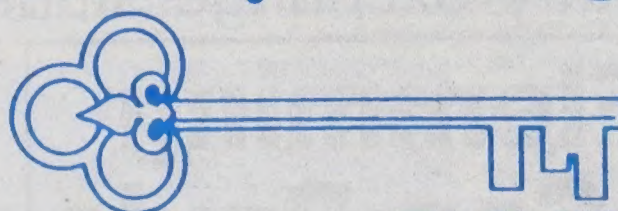

So far, Davis knows very little about the family he will be staying with. "All I know is their name, and that they have a daughter who will be on exchange in Sudbury."

He doesn't even know if they have any other children. But he does know the people are fairly wealthy in Spain, "so I don't have to worry about being a cow herder in the mountains, or something."

With Bark Lake Leaders in Training John Bennett, left, of Queen Elizabeth Park High School in Oakville, and Natalie Ethier, right, of Ecole Secondaire St. Marie, of New Liskeard flanking the dignitaries, MPP Dennis Drainville snips the ribbon to mark the official opening of the camp's new dining hall. Assisting in the festivities were, from the left, Gerry Ker representing the Ministry of Tourism and Recreation, Rob Hemming camp director, MPP Drainville, and Bud Schaab of the Ministry of Government Services. The $950,000 dining hall provided a suitable backdrop for the ceremony.

Bark Lake Camp opens new dining hall

Bark Lake Leadership Camp near Irondale has taken another step toward year-round operation with the opening of its $950,000 dining hall. The building, which has been in use for a number of months, was opened officially July 28.

The opening was attended by provincial representatives who spoke highly of the programs offered at the facility and its potential for growth in the future. Bud Schaab, representing the Ministry of Government Services pointed out the new 250 seat dining hall and kitchen was just the first step in changing the camp from a six month operation to a year round facility. He said the hall is the first of a number of winterized buildings. The government has confirmed that construction is expected to begin soon on an $800,000 winterized accommodation building.

The camp currently includes 70 buildings on a 320 acre site, surrounded by an additional 700 acre Crown reserve. The dining hall also includes facilities for accommodating the physically challenged. This latest feature will allow the camp to expand its services to that sector of the community.

Bark Lake Camp is a leadership training centre which provides a training program for youths from across the province. The program utilizes the wilderness setting for skills development in camping, outdoor education, recreation and environmental programs, with an emphasis on leadership. Those who attend are sponsored by groups and organizations in their home communities. Before attending, the youths agree to utilize the skills learned at the camp when they return home.

Camp Director, Rob Hemming, paid tribute to those who helped forge the vision of Bark Lake over its 40 years. In particular, he noted the contribution of Dallyn Pickens of Gooder-ham, and long time supporters Gord Wright and Dorothy Walters. He pointed out that while the visitors attending the ceremony were able to easily drive into the main lodge, those who started the camp walked the three miles from Highway 503 in the early days, making numerous trips to carry in their supplies.

Rotary student headed for Spain

Because the Rotary exchange department in Canada is so well-organized, Davis has already met with fellow exchange students at gatherings in Ottawa and Kirkland Lake.

"It gets you used to meeting new people, and to not being taken aback when someone speaks a language you don't have a clue about," he says. "It's good pre-conditioning."

Davis learned some things about Spain from people at these gatherings, and from Kendra Curry, who was in Spain as last year's Haliburton Rotary exchange student.

"The people Kendra stayed with were over-protective," says Davis. "The parties there start at 11, but they didn't like her to stay out late because she's a girl, so she couldn't do much."

Even though the males are generally given more freedom, Davis doesn't expect to spend most of his time at parties.

"I'm not really a run-around type of guy here in Haliburton, so I don't think I'll change," he says. "I don't stay out until two or three in the morning."

To prepare for his stay, Davis has read a couple of books on the country, and did a history project for school on the Spanish Civil War.

"I know Spain was a fascist country," he says. "And that they have dinner at 10 or 11 o'clock at night. Also, everything shuts down in the afternoon, and the people go home and sleep, or whatever."

"I don't think I've learned as much as I will two days after I've been there."

Davis says the Spanish Rotary clubs don't supervise the exchange program the way the local clubs do.

"The Rotary there leaves you on your own. Kendra only met with Rotary once. So you can fall into the cracks if you don't keep yourself busy."

"Hopefully, I'll be able to keep myself doing things," he says, "because it's easier to get lost out there."

To keep busy, Davis hopes to spend much of his time traveling throughout the country.

His plane lands in the capital of Madrid, "so I will be able to see the largest city in the country right off the bat."

Davis also longs to see the city of Valencia, and to visit the Sierra Nevada in the south.

"I have the chance to see the whole country in the year," he says. "Most people don't realize Spain is not nearly as large as Ontario."

And there are more than 39 million people in that limited space, compared to almost nine million in Ontario and 25 million in all of Canada.

"In Spain, you don't have to drive five miles to go from one place to the next. You're never very far from a major city."

The Spanish school system is large, and the students are ahead of those in North America, says Davis.

"Most of the Spanish guys I've met who are my age are going to university to write entrance exams. Kendra said she had the choice of going to the last year of high school or first year university in the area she stayed at."

"If I went to high school, I'd probably be the oldest one in my class, so I would prefer to go to university. It doesn't count for anything, so it would be good even if I flunk a course."

Because he speaks English, Davis is at an advantage in the exchange program. "It's a lot better for meeting people," he says.

"You always have someone in your Rotary club who speaks English. Whereas if someone came here from Denmark, they would be at a disadvantage because who in Minden speaks Danish?"

Davis has traveled a bit before, to Quebec, Vermont and Victoria. "But I've never been in a plane, so that will be different."

He's been told he'll need between $6,000 and $8,000 for expenses, but he questions whether he'll need that much money.

"It won't be too bad, anyway, because if I stay here my car insurance alone would cost $1,000. There I won't have to pay for boarding or meals."

Davis doesn't plan to spend much money on clothes, and will bring lots of Levi's jeans for two reasons.

First of all, they are a big fad in Spain, and cost up to $100 a pair.

Secondly, Davis is over six foot five inches tall, and figures he won't be able to find any pants in Spain long enough to fit him. "Apparently, Spanish guys are really short."

When the exchange program is over, Davis plans to travel with other students. And he appreciates the opportunity the Minden Rotary Club has provided him to broaden his horizons.

"I'll be 50 years old, and all my kids will be out of university, before I ever get enough cash to get a chance to go again," he says.

"It's great that Rotary is supported, because I may never get the chance again."

'I have the chance to see the whole country in the year,' says Dustin Davis of his pending trip to Spain. 'Most People don't realize Spain is not nearly as large as Ontario.'

Hustlers end season with 9-5 victory

Led by the home run hitting of Newfer Burk and Brian Shaw, the Rockcliffe Hustlers shut down Bobcaygeon 9-5 in a Tri-County Fastball League game played Thursday night at the Minden diamond. The game was the last of the regular season for the Hustlers and resulted in a third place finish for the locals.

Burk hit two home runs while Shaw knocked a single over the fence in the winning effort. Shaw also claimed pitching the win for the Hustlers with the loss going to Jeff Ingram.

On Wednesday, the Hustlers went down to a 5-3 defeat in Fenelon Falls. Shaw took the loss with Hutton the winning pitcher.

The Hustlers were scheduled to play one more game this week before the start of the play-offs, however, since the game would not have affected the final standings, it was decided to head right into the play-offs. However, when the local games would be played was still undecided at press time. Fans should check with a member of the team during the week for details.

For those who can't get enough baseball, this weekend should satisfy their appetite. The annual Rockcliffe Invitational Tournament will be held August 9, 10 and 11. The tournament has attracted 16 teams with the first game getting underway Friday evening at 7 p.m.

Newfer Burk slices into a home run during Thursday night's game against Bobcaygeon. Burk hit two homers in the last game of the regular season for the Hustlers. The play-offs begin this week.

Jug City trounces Muskoka 13-2

by Jim Milne

Westside Jug City defeated Muskoka Inter 13-2 in Muskoka District soccer action on Sunday, July 28. The score was 5-1 at the end of the first half. Hans Walter scored eight goals, Jan Haedicke scored two and Tim Davies, Marc Legere and Chris Holliday-Rhodes each scored one.

Muskoka Inter had only eight players. Perhaps the team is getting discouraged by their string of losses. On the other hand, Jug City playing at home and much more successful than Muskoka only had 10 players.

The next game for Jug City will be Sunday, August 11 against Huntsville. These opponents are leading the league while Jug City is third with 17 points in eight wins and one tie against two losses.

There will be no practices for Jug City before the August 11 game because there's no game on the Civic Holiday weekend.

Every available player should be ready to play August 11, however, because Jug City's last loss, against Barrie, was due in large part to a lack of good substitutes.

Double ace on second hole

The second hole at Blairhampton Golf Course was the site of two holes-in-one last week.

The first one-shot was accomplished on Saturday, July 28 by Miners Bay resident Tom Thompson who covered the 164-yard distance with a seven iron. Thompson's feat was witnessed by his wife Carol and Dave and Tara Kerrigan.

The following day,

Joyce McLellan of Toronto the ladies tee to the cup, as witnessed by Jean Mewhinney.

A Heineken Yard participant from local Kilcoo Camp gets moral support from friends as he rounds the corner of Deep Bay and Bobcaygeon Roads.

Heineken Yard runner breaks record 20:20 time shatters previous record by 90 seconds

A record number of runners took part in the annual running of the Heineken Yard footrace to Minden last Friday. 511 participants enjoyed almost perfect weather conditions for the 7.4 kilometre run from the gates of Camp Onondaga, along Deep Bay Road to the finish line on the Main Street.

Not only did this year's run attract a record crowd of participants, the course record was shattered by more than 90 seconds. Brendan Mathias, in the open men's category, for males 19 to 49, claimed the course record as he finished with a time of 20:20. The record time had double significance since this was the 20th running of the event. The previous record was 21:58.

Another runner in this group, Doug Cronkite, also broke the course record. He was second with a time of 21:04. Other top finishers included: Tony Brunner 22:09; George Thomlinson 22:19; Ted McKeigan 22:21; Robert Saffrey 22:34; Randal Rushton 23:32; Paul Leduc 23:48; Roger Brunner 24:03; and Peter Hickey 24:05.

Anne Emmett led the open women's group with a time of 26:49. Others in this category were Nanci Sweazey 28:38; Sandra Shearer 28:57; Cate Hachigan 29:49; Kate Larivier 29:52; Mary Ann Mera 30:46; Nancy Kaufman 30:54; Jayne Sandford 31:44; Fiona Savage 32:00; and Helen Melinberg 32:54.

Top three finishers in the masters' division, over 50 years of age, were, men: Brian Hill 30:59; Bob Burnistan 31:53; and Peter Pfeiffer 32:26. Women: Jennifer Wood; Margaret Armstrong.

In the under 18 division, Rob Major led the men with a time of 24:01. He was followed by Peter Braner at 26:21 and Maurizio Mazzola 26:58. In the women's division it was Rosalind Saye 28:15; Lindsay Mathers 28:49; and Jane Freure 31:10.

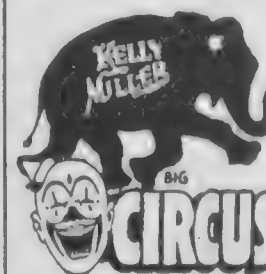

Northern Eagle won the club team event determined by the total time of the fastest three runners from the club. The top three finishers included Paul Deduc, Brad Shepherd and Marcel Crete. Second place went to the Ajax Running Club while the Toronto

Olympic Club was third.

The fastest corporate team award went to AMICI, the race organizers. Leading the way for the team were Terrence Hatton, Hal Hennafor and Andrew Merick. The Ontario Hydro team was second with CN Rail third.

Among the camps, Onondaga had the largest group of runners with 66 taking part. Kilcoo entered 43 runners for second spot and Wanakita and Camp Ponacka tied with 9 entries each. The Wanakita runners were the swiftest however, placing first in the camp team event. Second spot went to Onondaga while Ponacka was third.

Brazil not all fun and sun for Flemming

Although Flemming says these "slapped-together places" were dismal during the day, they were actually quite beautiful once the sun went down.

"They are all strung up with lights, and from a distance it looked like Christmas lights at night."

Christmas in Brazil was one time Flemming felt a little homesick.

He says the holiday isn't as big a deal in South America as it is here. "It just comes and goes, without you hardly noticing it."

It's also less commercialized. "They eat turkey, and have short, little Christmas trees," he says. "But there is no Christmas music, and there are very few things in the stores."

Flemming stayed with two families in his host town of Ribeirao Preto. His first host mother was separated from her husband, and lived with her 16-year-old daughter in a downtown apartment.

"That was an experience in noise," he says. Accustomed to the quiet surroundings of his parents' home on Mistivale Trail, Flemming found it difficult to sleep at night with the constant din of busy traffic, including lots of motorcycles, outside his window.

Many exchange students find it hard to cope with being dropped into a new country with a family of strangers, and some never adjust.

But Flemming didn't find it difficult. "It seems like it should be, but it really isn't," he says. "You wonder what the people are like, and whether they have strange habits in the middle of the night. I was lucky, though, because they were all really nice people.

"Some of my friends had big problems, though."

Learning to conform

Because he only shared the apartment with two people, the first place Flemming stayed was very different from his usual life with parents Stan and Frances, sister Susan and twin brother Rob.

"The house was a little bit quiet, but that was no problem," he says.

He soon got used to certain aspects of life in Brazil, especially the fact that he didn't have to help much around the house.

"You don't have to do anything," he says. "I think my mom has noticed that."

Many people in Brazil have drivers, "who take their kids everywhere."

Because the host mother worked as a psychologist, the first family Flemming stayed with had a maid come in three times a week. And, throughout the country, females are "less liberated."

"The guys there get away with a lot more than they could in Minden. In mixed company, the guys would sit around while the girls would fix everything for them. Here, everybody fends for themselves."

Strange as it may sound, Flemming had a tough time dealing with this male-oriented society. "Sometimes it was great, but I think people are better off to fend for themselves."

One of the things which was hard for Flemming was what attracted him to Brazil in the first place — the language.

He didn't want to go to an English-speaking country, and is already fairly fluent in French, so he looked forward to learning Portuguese.

It was alienating in the beginning. When you are sitting amongst people speaking a different language, you wonder what they are saying and whether it's anything bad about you.

"The first two weeks were a little difficult, because I couldn't understand a thing," he says, but luckily it wasn't long before he could communicate.

"When you're immersed in it like that, you can't not learn the language. It's impossible."

Brazil is famous for fun, and partying there is more a way of life than an event.

"They are much more open about it," says Flemming. "Parents are accepting, and will take you to parties."

"Drinking is a lot more open, too. Not in the sense of drinking a lot, but the people get used to it. Kids there can drink as soon as their parents let them. By the time they're 16, they know how to drink and to respect it, which I think is good."

Coming home at 2 a.m. is "really early," says Flemming. "Five is pretty good, and six is really good."

The cities come alive at night, with music and dancing.

At parties, dance music such as C & C Music Factory, Dance Shop and Black Box fill the air, while the more traditional samba is played at carnival.

Although popular British and North American music can be heard on the radio, Brazilians also listen to a wide range of typical, regional music, including their own form of country.

"They like that the way we like to listen to Randy Travis," says Flemming.

Despite the similarities in music, the parties in Brazil are very different from those here.

Most are held in bars or clubs. "There are very few parties in houses. The only ones held at houses are for things like birthdays, and then there's tons of food and appetizers and aperitifs. It's very formal."

A Brazilian barbecue, or churrasco, is a big event which begins at 11 a.m.

"They put lots and lots of meat on the grill. They eat heavily salted beef, chicken and sausages, and lots of bread and salads."

"You sit and eat and drink beer all day long until the sun sets," says Flemming. "They always laugh at us when you tell them about North-American style barbecues, where you just eat hot dogs and hamburgers."

The food in Brazil was a far step from North American fare. "It was good, really natural stuff. Not like health food, but fresh."

Market value reassessment hot topic at cottagers' meeting desirable properties, namely lakefront, it will decrease the taxes of less desirable locations such as farms or more rural areas away from the lakes and rivers. The changes will also affect commercial properties.

Stanhope Council voted against introducing MVA earlier this year but the new system could still be introduced into the entire county if a majority of county councillors vote in favour of it in January.

Stanhope is one of the top three municipalities in the county in terms of the number of seasonal residents it has, said Young, and it is lakefront properties that face the largest increases.

While Stanhope's most desirable land will be subject to tax increases anywhere from one per cent to 60 per cent, some will see decreases to the same extent, said Young.

"A lot of those seemingly high percentages work out to be $200," said Young, adding that a lot of people expecting decreases are eager to see the new system introduced.

The current taxes are figured with a factoring system based on market values from 1978. The new system is based on 1988 market values.

Young said properties that have appreciated the most since 1978 are the ones that will be most affected, and that during assessment visits, assessors came across a lot of renovations and changes that had never been reported.

"We found improvements that had never been assessed before," he said, explaining why some increases could be much higher than others.

"It's not a tax grab. There's no increase in the total (being collected), just a re-distribution based on a 1988 value with a single mill rate for the whole county," he said, adding that the amount collected is predicated on education costs.

All municipalities in Haliburton County, with the exception of Glamorgan, voted to defer adoption of MVA pending further information said Young. Glamorgan has already adopted the new system.

In a county-wide analysis, Young said five municipalities would see increases and five would see decreases.

"For example, Snowdon's costs will go up about $6,000 and the majority (of taxpayers) will see reductions in taxes," he said.

Young advised the frustrated taxpayers that he was only responsible for dividing up the total collected, not for deciding how much to collect.

"If your concern is taxation, that's not an assessment problem. If you want the tax laws changed, go to Drainville and the Fair Tax Committee," he said.

Under MVA a taxpayer can appeal an assessment, but Young warned that only the assessment, not the taxation structure, can be appealed.

"The Chairman will only talk about assessment. If you can prove the assessment on your property is in error you can get your taxes changed."

Brazil's a nice place to visit, but...

Fresh rice and beans and fish and meat. And lots of fresh vegetables and exotic fruits."

Flemming never really felt comfortable in the houses south of the border.

"The houses look really cold," he says, "with lots of tile and cement and rock. It was hard to get used to, because our houses are so cozy up here. But because of the heat there, you can't have a carpet or you'll die."

When looking back on Brazil, Flemming will think of the immensely beautiful country, exciting nightlife, and colourful people.

However, because of the poverty, he concurs with a Brazilian friend who maintains: "It's a nice place to visit, but I wouldn't want to live there."

Still, he is grateful to Rotary for the "opportunity of a lifetime, and would love to return one day."

"It was just a fabulous experience for the amount you learn, and just the good time you have, too."

Flemming will be an OAC (Ontario Academic Credit, or Grade 13) student at Haliburton high school next year. And although he's not sure yet what to study in university, he feels the exposure to another culture will help him decide.

"You do learn a lot about yourself," he says. "You get a lot of time to think. When you see a completely different culture, where their thought process works differently, that reflects back on yourself."

Through the Rotary program, Flemming made a lot of good friends from across North America, and beyond. In fact, one of his best friends was from Denmark.

From talking with these friends, Flemming learned of other areas he'd like to visit. "I'd love to see Australia. And Denmark, too. They really know how to party in Denmark."

Happy 125th Birthday, Stanhope!

Mary Oliver, 102, had the honour of cutting the anniversary cake at Stanhope's celebrations. The day's festivities included speeches, flag raisings and ribbon-cuttings at the firehall, the airport and the new municipal office.

by Carol Moffatt

Hundreds of well-wishers including MP Bill Scott and MPP Dennis Drainville turned out Saturday to join in the pomp and circumstance of Stanhope's 125th anniversary festivities.

Residents and cottagers of all ages heartily applauded speeches, ribbon-cuttings and flag-raising ceremonies at the airport, the firehall and the new municipal office.

The Royal Canadian Legion Colour Guard, branches 636 and 129, and the Pipe and Drum Band opened the ceremonies at each location with a flourish of music and honour.

A shuttle bus provided free transportation from one event to the next.

At the airport a fly-in barbecue was underway and continued through the day, bringing in planes and pilots from all over.

In his speech at the airport, MP Bill Scott congratulated the people of Stanhope for their dedication to making their township a special place.

He made special mention of the effort of the township's many volunteers for the improvements at the airport over the years, and recalled his memories of the area when he was a boy.

"You've improved this place, you've marked it in the history of the country and it's known far and wide," he said to the gathered crowd.

Louise Watson, 87, a member of the original airport committee in 1968 and an honorary member of the current committee spoke of how the airport came to be and of some of the changes over the years.

"Today I feel a bit like someone who's been away for awhile and just come home," she said, adding when she joined the group learning to fly in 1961 they were flying off the ice at Twelve Mile Lake.

Later that year the group had to find somewhere else to fly from and the idea of the airport was born, she said.

At the end of the speeches the Canadian flag was raised by Legion members as Stanhope resident and anniversary committee chairman Jock Mavor led the crowd in the singing of O Canada.

Bill Scott and Reeve Harry Davis cut the ribbon and Master of Ceremonies, Councillor Fred Gardiner, announced the airport officially open.

An hour later at the recently renovated and expanded firehall, MPP Dennis Drainville thanked the people of Stanhope for the work they've put into the township, and spoke of the need of people to look out for one another.

"This firehall is a testimony to the fact that a community needs to care for all its people. The equipment, and the fine training that goes on among the crew of the firehall is exemplified in all the people involved in this firehall," he said.

Fire Chief Bob Nangle was presented with a plaque from Jim Colson of the Fire Marshall's Office in honour of both the anniversary and the addition of a training room to the firehall. Chief Nangle responded with a brief history of the firehall.

Members of the Royal Canadian Legion raise the Canadian, provincial and township flags at the new municipal offices, accompanied by the audience singing O' Canada led by Jock Mavor.

The firehall was declared officially open when Colson and Nangle cut the ribbon held by Fire Captains John Hogg and Jim Moore.

The Pipe and Drum Band then led the audience to the new municipal office where the Canadian flag, the Provincial flag and the municipal flag were raised by Legion members to the accompaniment of O Canada.

Gardiner acknowledged the presence of Mary Oliver, 102, Stanhope's oldest citizen, who had come from Minden's Hyland Crest especially for the celebrations.

Bill Scott spoke briefly and presented Reeve Davis with a congratulatory message from Prime Minister Brian Mulroney. Dennis Drainville presented Reeve Davis with a congratulatory plaque from Premier Bob Rae.

Bill Scott also presented Davis with a portrait of Queen Elizabeth for the council chambers.

"Things have changed a lot in 125 years. Some of you people I hardly recognize - your clothes have changed," Davis said with a laugh.

"It all started 20 years ago when Sinc Nesbitt was reeve. We built a firehall, then we decided we should have a township garage, then we added a library and now you have a beautiful new municipal office and, man, are we proud of it. I am overwhelmed and I'm happy that you're here with us to enjoy it," he added.

Council members were introduced and as Drainville, Scott, Davis and Haliburton Warden Carol Puffer cut the ribbon to open the municipal office, a W.W. II Harvard Trainer dipped its wings in a triple fly-by over the office.

Gardiner invited the crowd to tour the new offices, to enjoy a buffet set up in the council chambers and to view the original records, bylaws, and old photos.

MPP Dennis Drainville, Haliburton Warden Carol Puffer, Stanhope Reeve Harry Davis and MP Bill Scott officially open the new municipal offices with a ceremonial ribbon-cutting. About 200 people looked on and then toured the new facilities and enjoyed a buffet.

We're all responsible

For a number of reasons, I've spent almost two weeks in and around Calgary. The city has a wonderful gung-ho vitality and, I discovered, a thriving environmental movement.

Much of it has coalesced to oppose the Alberta government's decision to commit more than 220,000 square kilometres of boreal forest to feed a series of huge pulp mills (including the biggest kraft mill in the world).

Those mills will consume the forest ecosystem, pollute air and watersheds and radically disrupt the way of life of native and non-native inhabitants of the area. Yet there has been no comprehensive assessment of the total environmental impact of the mills.

On June 2, Northern Lights, a coalition of 25 Alberta environmental groups sponsored a benefit to protest the dams. An eclectic collection of native people, environmental activists, entertainers, young people and ordinary citizens attracted 1,500 people on a sunny weekend.

Listening to the speakers, I felt that now that public concern is widespread, environmental calls to action must move beyond the simple cliches. For example, one of the major speakers at the event asked rhetorically, "Who is to blame for the crisis we're in?", then went on to answer it: "Look in the mirror. Look at the person sitting next to you. We're all responsible."

It is true, of course, that our very existence puts stress on the environment while our personal lifestyles - disproportionately in the industrialized countries and especially in Canada - are fuelling the planetary ecocrisis. But the people at the benefit were there for answers and ways to help. They are desperate for solutions, as well as political vision and leadership.

Earlier in the week, I interviewed a spokesperson for the oil industry who suggested the public was hypocritical to rate the environment as a high priority while continuing to drive cars wastefully. Most cars on city streets and crowded highways carry a single occupant - the driver. But decades of government encouragement and subsidy of the automobile have created a vast network of roads and infrastructures to support them.

Cars are a central feature of our lives and culture.

Reflections

by David Suzuki

It's simply unreasonable to expect people to stop using vehicles without accessible and convenient replacements. Gas taxes must be raised to encourage efficient car use and to fund research on alternatives. Since public transit is already heavily subsidized, why not make it free?

A speaker urged the audience to "write to politicians and let them know what you think." Well, I write a lot and also urge others to send letters. But having received more than my share of superficial answers that fail to respond seriously to my concern and having watched government and industrial collusion override public pressure, I believe it is a delusion to think politicians respond sensitively. They are too busy and they are bound up in the web of "political realities".

The tenets of environmentalism threaten the current modus operandi of government and business. A sustainable society must be based in local communities that are relatively autonomous and self-sufficient. They will conserve, be in balance with the carrying capacity of ecosystems, stress the long term over the immediate, consume less and protect above all else an intact biosphere. This profoundly threatens the priority major industries and multinational corporations place on short-term profits and growth.

The Alberta NDP environment critic announced he supports an environmental bill of rights to guarantee all citizens the right to a clean environment. But clean air, water and soil and biological diversity must not be a matter of partisan politics. If those guarantees are only ensured by electing the right party, then we have not truly understood that those life-support systems have to be sacrosanct. Air, water and soil must be cherished as precious beyond debate or cost.

Our great boast as a species is the possession of intelligence. Ecological awareness informs us of our place within and dependence on an intact planetary biosphere that must subsume all other human priorities. The social and economic implications are immense and we must get past the simple-minded rhetoric to find a way to make the transition. In Calgary, as all across Canada, grassroots concern is real and must now be focused on the underlying root causes and possible solutions.

Dorset acid rain report

The following report on precipitation events was recorded at the Ministry of Environment acid rain testing station in Dorset and compiled by Environment Canada.

This report covers the period of July 21 to July 27, 1991.

July 22, 49 mm rain, 4.3 pH from Northern Michigan and Lake Michigan.

July 25, 1 mm rain, 4.5 pH from Lake Huron, Northern Michigan and Northern Wisconsin.

Environmental damage is usually observed in sensitive areas regularly receiving precipitation with pH less than 4.7. Readings of 4.0 pH or less are considered dangerous. The lower the reading, the more acidic the precipitation.

The unwinnable war

Insects are the bane of my existence. Or at least the wife's bane, which she shares gladly.

Generally, I find bugs easy to ignore. After all, they don't take up much space, get sick or need petting. They are hard to play with. And they are cheap to have around. But they do need to be fed and that's where they get my attention.

Not that they feed much on me, but the wife is prime meat. Her anti-bug antics are a sight to behold. By the time she has wrapped up, rubbed down, sprayed around, swatted about, run away, doused, loused and housed, there's no peace to be had.

So out of self preservation I join the fray.

The first thing I learned is that there are more anti-bugging devices on the market than the CIA has spooks. The second is that all of them are much bigger than the pests they are supposed to eliminate. And none is cheap. The result is an unpaid Visa balance and a huge clutter of bug stuff. Bug stuff for a psychological war that is not winnable.

The war is like going to battle with a flintlock against high tech weaponry. For some reason the bugs have the tech. Maybe they have the budget because they live so cheap. Or because they can amortize the costs over a hoard of millions. Or because they have collaborated with the manufacturers.

For instance, I am suspicious with all of our genius, research and money that no one has marketed a

The Intrepid Cottager

by Craig Nicholson

safe, inexpensive product that with one simple use will eliminate bugs. They seem to be immune. I wonder about the fact that I have to buy a different product for each species of bug. Like movie stars each with their own fragrance. I am compelled to buy a whole new supply of pest stuff each spring regardless of what's left over from last year. And in return, I suspect that the bugs have agreed to stay away from the homes of the manufacturers for the duration.

So I ante up for metal traps which require a tool kit to open and a gooey liquid that sticks everything to everything but ants. Place each "where the ants are" and watch the dogs try to eat them.

For house flies, defined as those that get in doors, I purchase swatters whose heads fly off into the salad, dangling strips that I'm always walking into, vapor blocks whose smell makes me sick and spray which fogs up the window panes.

All the other flies, defined as those few that are not lucky enough to have got in that time the door opened, I squish with my bare hands, inhale or drown in my drink. Horse flies, named by size not according to meal preference, only attack me in the canoe or floating on the raft. I have inflicted more self damage with missed swats than injury to these pests.

Wasps and hornets I leave pretty much alone except for trying to discourage their nests on my property. Smoke, fire and long distance spray bombs each have their place as does the snorkel and mask that I wear for backup, always keeping the shortest route to the lake in mind. If one gets in the house, I just leave until it dies of old age.

I spend the summer smelling of Deep Woods Off or Musk Oil or both. Hardly a romantic aroma except to mosquitoes. But the wife wears it and so do the dogs and soon we don't even notice each other anymore. Like when everybody eats garlic.

With coils, smudge pots and bug lights, the place is a real delight to be around. But no more than yours truly the summer I tried not bathing as the ultimate repellent. The wife said it worked for her. The dogs tried to roll in me. The mosquitoes stayed away, but I cleaned up when I began to attract flies.

As for the other massed insect hoards hovering about outside, I have capitulated except for the electric bug zapper which can't hold its own but sounds great trying. I still get a kick out of crunching June bugs under foot as long as I'm wearing shoes. The Martins left me for classier digs down the bay and now the dragon flies are my last natural defense.

For unnatural defense

I have long sleeve turtle necks and gloves which are great for weight loss in ninety degree weather. Then there's the bug hats that mat the hair and make spitting sloppy. Together this ensemble is cumbersome and not recommended for greeting new neighbours.

The wife's solution to the bug menace is good screens and staying inside all summer. Who am I to argue with someone who swells to mump proportions at every bite? So last year I expanded the wife's great outdoors with a screened gazebo attached to the house - a truly bug proof arrangement. After labouring all day to sew, tape, nail, stick, fold and staple all potential bug entrances, I proudly announced that her sanctum was ready - "No bug will ever get inside!" I declared.

She went into the gazebo to admire my handy work and exclaimed: "And if bugs to get in, honey, this bird will eat them!"

I explained lamely that it came with the gazebo, but the wife likes birds either outside or cooked, so I caught it with my baseball cap and went over all the seams again.

To keep the wife company this summer I am staying in the gazebo and laughing at the frantic entry efforts of the bugs denied their favourite meal. I don't miss being bitten. And for once I smell normal.

The Huskies seem to be sniffing the air more than usual. I think they scent winter coming.

Number of inquiries slow replies

Many of you have been contacting my office to seek assistance with a variety of problems, from Worker's Compensation to social services and general requests for government information.

I want you to know my staff and I take all your concerns and problems seriously, but because of the load, it may be taking some time to work through all the cases and requests we get. We genuinely regret not being able to help everyone as quickly as we would like to. The reality is we have a recession in this county and it has created a great deal of hardship in the form of lay-offs and plant closures. The resulting unemployment has placed tremendous stress on the social system and all its resources. Please understand if you are having problems in this area, my staff is doing their best to help where they can.

We have many Worker's Compensation cases on file and some of these cases date back a few years. Again, I stress we take each one seriously, but because of the backlog it may take some time before each one is dealt with.

One way you may be

Drainville Diary A report from Queen's Park

With Dennis Drainville, MPP

able to help speed up your general requests is to make use of the Queen's Park Public Enquiry number, 416-326-1234. This referral service operates during business hours and will direct you to the correct agency or department to answer your questions on government policy or programs.

DEMOCRATIC REFORMS NEEDED

The need to change how decisions are made at Queen's Park is still as strong and urgent now as it was before you elect a New Democratic government last fall. This is because simply changing political parties doesn't necessarily mean the rules are going to automatically change.

As a member of your government, it would be easy to sit back and take advantage of the old ways of doing things - ways which kept the powerful in power and everyone else on the outside looking in. However, I was elected to best serve the needs of the riding as a New Democrat. To me, that means I should be working to change the system to help you - not to leave it as is, which hurts you.

Some pretty basic reforms I have supported include changing how Question Period works and how citizens can have input into legislation.

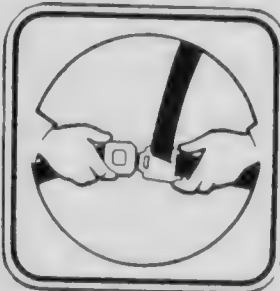

Anyone watching Question Period while sitting in the Public Galleries probably thinks they have been let loose in the local zoo. Members on both sides of the House (government MPPs sit to the right of the Speaker and Opposition sit on the left of the Speaker) use this time to score political points against the other rather than engage in rational debate. Obviously this has the effect of not allowing the truth to come through nor the issues to be addressed.

Question Period is supposed to allow any MPP the opportunity to ask a Minister a question about a policy or action of the Ministry and to get as full and complete an answer as possible. Because members can take as long as they want to ask questions and Ministers can take as long as they want to respond, it provides too much time for partisan political rhetoric which ultimately leads to issues again not being addressed.

We discussed this issue on the last day the House sat before the Summer recess. I suggested that strict time rules on both questions and answers would make in easier for the MPPs to focus on what their real jobs are.

Next week, I will be presenting ideas on how to increase the effectiveness of the Legislative Committees.

200 enjoy fun day

Over 200 residents and cottagers of Stanhope and surrounding areas celebrated in fun style the 125th Anniversary Family Day held last Saturday at the Stanhope Park.

Once again the Recreation Committee of the Township of Stanhope hosted this family event which involved three hours of games and relays for ages two years to adult.

With 22 relays or races held throughout the afternoon, the recreation committee kept the pace hopping and everyone seemed to have a smile on his face. To help cool things down, the various water games were inviting and kids enjoyed the candy tosses.

The snack bar was certainly busy with 50-cent hot dogs and drinks being the snackers' delight.

The afternoon ended with a Community "Dodge Ball" game and afterwards the tired but happy children clutched their ribbons and prizes as they headed home. Even moms and dads wore their ribbons with pride.

The recreation committee tee is formed by volunteers who live in the area. They organize a large variety of community events, many dances, games and play days, Crafty Critters Club, The Soda Club, also including a summer day camp program and eight-week Red Cross Swim program.

Many people comment on our low prices of admission to our dances and our reasonable snack bar prices. "Our dance buffets are all homemade foods by the ladies of the recreation committee," says chairman Thelda McGuire. "We are not out to make money off those who attend our functions - we are providing a service, a source of fun and entertainment for the young and senior folks of our community. We want all people to be able to afford to attend the various activities."

Watch the paper for upcoming events such as Pub Nights and Octoberfest Dance.

Anyone interested in joining the team, please contact Thelda at 489-3028 or the Township Office at 489-2309.

Rock bass take a beating at Horseshoe Lake derby

One hundred and eighty-five pounds of rock bass were caught by the kids around Horseshoe Lake during the third annual Horseshoe Lake Property Owners' Association Kids Rock Bass Derby held on July 28, 1991. Teenagers, Rob and Jim Williams, together pulled in 28 pounds. Chad Skelding, 12-years-old, weighed in 18 pounds. In the seven- to nine-year-old category,

Rich and Andy Kinsman took top prize for 13 pounds. The largest single fish (12 ounces) was that of six-year-old Michael Brown. The six years and under category was topped by a tie for first prize between Colin Moch and Holly Lloyd with five pounds five ounces each. The smallest rock bass of the day netted Brian Grigg a nice prize. Seventy young anglers participated and they seemed happy to trade off their catch of the day for ribbons and the prizes graciously donated by our sponsors (see Classified advertisement formally acknowledging their generous support).

Horseshoe Lake is known for good large mouth and small mouth bass fishing. Removal of voracious rock bass gives the more desirable black bass fingerlings a better chance of survival. C.P.R. (Catch, Photograph, and Release) is encouraged for any really large black bass as they are the breeding stock. A fine meal of the more plentiful medium sized bass is a better idea. These younger bass are more healthy to eat as they have less accumulated biocides in them.

The rock bass weigh-in was held in the afternoon at the Plooard's boathouse down McCracken's Lane.

Carol Ward and Pat and Kelly Gil registered the official weights as determined by Grant Plooard and Randy Ward. Vern Gilbert, (more on page 37)

The yard and auction sale held by the Pastoral Charge of the United Church was a huge success. The Committee wish to thank all the donors, volunteers and member who provided articles for sale. A special thanks to Norm Mills, our auctioneer, who also provided storage until sale time, also the use of his facility for the sale. The proceeds of over $2500 will probably be enough to purchase new windows for the manse. Donald and Ellen Holden just arrived back from Ottawa and Kingston. They took their young grandson Trevor Moore to see the Parliament Buildings and various museums and also all through Fort Henry.

I noticed that Jim Garbutt helps at our building with the recycling of paper, tins, plastic and glass. It's a start, but people cannot seem to see the garbage containers on our Main Street.

All good wishes to these people: Olive Daniels, Al Hudson, Terri Campbell and Alice Don. Hope you are all feeling better soon.

Harold and Louise Hogg of Belleville and Nell Finley of Lindsay had brief visits with Joyce Hewitt.

I watched Prince Charles speaking about our environment. The sites he visited all over the world are really scary. I often wonder if there is any way to correct the mistakes made by all nations. I also consider the extremely hot and humid weather of our July, might be from the Greenhouse effects. I hope attitudes change to correct these things.

The Minden Rotary Carnival had a happy atmosphere with stage shows, games and rides and there you met people for a chat. The skies had a down pour with a spectacular view of a double rainbow in the heavy shower.

Thought I should include once again the number for Foot Clinic for you to call for appointment, it is (705) 745-9155 - long distance.

A collection has been set up in our village for a resident, Judy Stevenson, who is in need for funds for several serious operations on her back. Hope you saw the containers and put in something. All the best to you, Judy.

Too stubborn to stop paddling

It certainly is easy to get depressed these days. I refuse to watch the National anymore, and stopped reading the Globe and Star (except for the weekend colour comics). I even wait with trepidation for the Times and Echo's weekly arrival. Brian in Ottawa got elected to make changes, but all the changes seem to be for the worse. We were better off when he was shooting himself in the foot with one scandal after another. Whenever the air starts to clear and he has time to concentrate, that's when we get free traded, G.S.T'd and Meeched.

Let's not forget about Dennis Drainville. All he has to do to get re-elected for life is build the hospital he and Premier Bob promised. I remember him saying that "It would be a given" if they got elected. With a ten billion dollar deficit, the only thing that seems to be happening is his expressive verbosity about the need to provide quality care for us Haliburtonians. Simply, Dennis, tell us instead when the sod is to be turned, and if local contractors, not big city union boys, will get a chance to help put it up.

Locally, our Chamber went to County and pleaded our case that if we no longer were able, because of County funding cuts, to promote the County, how then was the County going to be promoted? Yawns and more talk about the need for study and taking inventory of what is here. Even our reminder that we will run out of money in November and be unavailable to help their planner, plan, brought silence except the sound of more paper shuffling.

Minden Council decided it wasn't worth pursuing bringing 400 Fellow Municipal Conventioneers and their spouses to the area after originally asking us to help them and having the Chamber work on it for the past year. For Gosh Sakes, Steve Bowskill is even threatening to close down the Skyslider and tear it down. The final straw, I think is Morton Schulman has stopped sending me his come ons to buy his Money-wise Money Letter on how to get rich. Times are tough even on Bay Street.

Taking a break from all these disasters, I went for a leisurely evening sunset cruise on July 29th. Our resident loons have been quiet all summer. Their nest had been destroyed in early June by some predator. Everyone on the lake assumed it was over for the season. Turning the corner of our bay, there 30 feet ahead were our two resident loons about a foot apart. As we went past, we could suddenly see between them, paddling furiously and bopping right along, a tiny newly hatched baby loon. The seeming aloof pride of Mom and Dad, as they casually circled our boat (to ensure everyone could get the best view of their offspring) was self-evident.

I suddenly realized how precarious was this family situation. Their baby is 6-8 weeks late. They have to not only protect it, but raise it strong enough to fly south in less than 90 days. By mid-August many adult loons are already beginning to group together for the flight out. Is Cranberry Lake's baby loon, like us, going to make it? Maybe we should take a lesson from one of Canada's national symbols. Depending on your viewpoint, it is either too dumb or too stubborn or both to quit. It just keeps coming back, and paddling on ahead. You know, I think, it just might make it.

Flower show will feature critters

What next? Critters 'N Flowers, of course! that is the theme of the Minden and District Horticultural Society's 1991 Annual Flower Show to be held in the Minden Community Centre on August 8 and 9.

Once again there is an interesting prize list containing oodles of flower and vegetable categories and the decoratives blend in with the theme. The decorations or arrangements provide fun and imagination can run wild as these exhibits are fashioned for show. This year, little critters such as bugs, frogs and butterflies may be among the flowers peeking up at you as if to say "Hope you are enjoying the show, we're glad you came".

As usual there is a section especially for children 16 years and under, one for men and another section for male and female (adults).

Get a prize list and get in on the competitions. It has been a great year for gardens, so bring your best specimens and win yourself some prizes.

There will be a refreshment area again where you can sit and relax. Tea, coffee, juice and goodies will be served to you. Chit-chat with friends and it's a pleasant way to make new acquaintances.

Decorations, of course, will carry out the theme. "Critters 'N Flowers" will be here, there and everywhere.

This is our 12th Annual Flower Show and we urge everyone to get in on the bandwagon and participate. Bring in your entries on Thursday morning. Judging takes place at 7 p.m. Thursday evening for public viewing - aren't you anxious to see how many ribbons you win? All prizes (cash) will be awarded at the end of the show, 2:30 p.m.

on Friday, August 9. Oh yes, and your admission of $2 includes refreshments and a chance for a door prize; and two demonstrations.

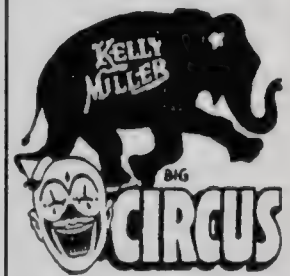

An added attraction this year will be two demonstrations. On Friday morning at 10:30 a.m. Elizabeth Carrell will tell us how to preserve flowers for many uses. She will demonstrate how these dried or pressed flowers can be made into beautiful and very useful items, perhaps book marks, pictures, etc.

At 1 p.m. on Friday afternoon, Anne Neave will present a demonstration "How to Make a Terrarium".

So please support our local Horticultural Society on August 8 and 9 and have an enjoyable hour or so browsing amid the "Critters 'N Flowers". See you there!

Young pianist entertains residents

Sunday, July 21 the residents of Hyland Crest had a special treat when Di-anne Garbutt from Minden entertained us with a program of beautiful piano music. She had studied in Haliburton High School. We thank her heartily and look forward to her coming again.

Sunday evening Chapel Service was conducted by Rev. John Burgess with Alice Jones playing the organ, which we appreciate very much.

Doris had a video tape shown in the main lounge of Mary Oliver's life story. Mary told of her life in England, coming to Canada and settling in the Halls Lake area. It was enjoyed very much by the residents.

Monday evening Pat Bradburn presented the movies which were "Long Point Sanctuary", "Yukon Old, Yukon New" and "Saddle Maker".

July 23 Doris took us for a bus ride. She intended to drive around Sawyers Lake. We went up Hwy. 121 to Allsaw Bridge then turned off to the west but somehow we took the wrong turn (which is easy to do in there) and came to Horseshoe Lake, the White Water Rapids and on to Kawartha Dairy for ice cream. We ordered ice cream and went to pay for it, but it was on the house again. We thank them for their generosity and kindness to the Hyland Crest residents. Also thank you Linda, Doris, Jean Robson and her sister Dorothy for your care of us.

Tuesday evening we had reading at 6 p.m. We haven't had reading for a couple of weeks, so we were very thankful when Dianna Morris was able to read to us.

Most of Wednesday was used to prepare for the Box Social Dinner and Square Dance after. Don't think there isn't a lot of preparation for a function like we had last night. It was worth it seeing all the beautiful boxes and baskets that were auctioned and so much delicious food. I thought when Doris was auctioning the boxes she had missed her calling, but I am glad she chose what she did and Linda makes such a good working partner.

Thanks to Rheta Jones, the Administrator, for her words of welcome to relatives of residents who provided lunches for residents, especially to those of the staff who provided lunches for residents who had no one to bring a lunch. To the boys who played for the dancing, Don Alton, Norman Graham, Don White, Charlie Hadley and caller Earle Kent. To those people who were able to get up and dance (especially square dancing) and to the nursing staff who made the residents who required help to look so nice and neat. Overall it was a very successful evening.

Congratulations to Isabella Gardiner who had a birthday on July 25, 1991.

Thursday tea party was provided by the ladies and gentlemen from Kennis Lake, also this was the birthday tea. Those who served the delicious tea were Yolanda and Murray Winger, Betty Davidson, Earla Hume and Jim Helkinson. At the birthday table out of five, we only had Pearl Lyle and Marie McPhail present. Since several of the downstairs ladies were present, Cora Upton, Pearl's sister, was seated with Pearl. It was so nice to see the two sisters together. We thank the Kennis Lake Tourist Association ladies and gentlemen (especially when they came such a long way) sincerely.

Troy and Nancy Briggs conducted bingo Thursday evening. They do a real good job and we thank them very much.

Friday was Happy Hour with Bill Payne, Don White and Charley Hadley and Doris Robertson providing the music and Dorothy Milne, Mary Guillemin looked after the beverages during Ellen and Don Holden's (volunteers) absence.

Dianna Morris came at 6 p.m. to continue reading a Danielle Steele book. Thanks Dianna, that passes time swiftly.

FIRST NOTICE

LAKE TROUT SPAWNING SHOAL REHABILITATION

July 31, 1991

The Leslie M. Frost Natural Resources Centre is proposing to rehabilitate lake trout spawning shoals in the following lakes:

Raven Lake - Sherborne and Ridout Twp.
Margaret Lake - Ridout Twp.
Little Hawk Lake - Stanhope Twp.
Big Hawk Lake - Sherborne and Stanhope Twp.

The absence of suitable spawning habitat is considered a factor in limiting the natural reproduction of lake trout in these lakes. By providing a greater area of suitable size rock rubble and cleaning of traditional spawning areas, natural lake trout reproduction will be enhanced. This in turn should improve local lake trout angling opportunities.

These projects are being planned under the Ministry of Natural Resources' approved class environmental assessment for Water-related Excavation, Dredge and Fill Activities. Such assessments are intended to give interested and affected parties the opportunity to provide input to the planning of such projects and to request, if necessary, individual treatment under the Environmental Assessment Act.

You are invited to direct any further inquiries, comments or concerns regarding these projects to Wayne Wilson, Fish and Wildlife Specialist, Leslie M. Frost Natural Resources Centre by August 16, 1991.

Planning of these projects will be continued and final notice issued to those who have responded to this initial notice and those who are directly affected.
